

MCCARREN SAVES HUGH McLAUGHLIN

New Leader Counseled Against Plan of Hot Heads to Read
Old Boss Out of Democratic Party.

RESOLUTION WAS ALL READY

Rank and File Are Bitter Against McLaughlin Because They See
Nothing in Sight and a Hard Winter Coming On.

Senator McCarren blocked an attempt to read Hugh McLaughlin out of the Democratic party last night because of the recent interviews McLaughlin has given out in regard to the political situation.

The idea of reading the old boss out of the party, which has been talked of ever since he kicked the traces and refused to be regular, took shape yesterday after he gave out the interview in which he practically bolted the whole ticket and asked his friends to vote for Low.

The interview, while given to the organ of the party, was not intended for general distribution, and copies of it were struck off and handed to the reporters when they went to McLaughlin's headquarters in the auction room yesterday afternoon.

After their publication the interview was discussed by men in the rank and file of the party, who have been getting sicker about what they term the indifference of the boss to the fact that a cold winter is coming on and everybody is not as well fixed as he is to withstand a siege out of work.

At a meeting in the Twentieth Assembly District last night, it was intended by many of the supporters of McLaughlin, Brunt and Pomes and the Democratic County and Borough tickets, to read McLaughlin out of the party.

It was hoped that the passing of a resolution condemning him and announcing that he was no longer a Democrat might be followed by the passing of similar resolutions in nearly all the meetings from now on until election.

It was late in the evening when Senator McCarren heard of it. While he did not absolutely forbid the passing of the resolution, he is said to have counseled against it and it was not introduced. The resolution, it is said, would be passed to-night in one of the many meetings in the Eastern District or in South Brooklyn.

Whereas, he regularly enrolled Democrats, believing in the fundamental principles of Democracy, believing in and having confidence in the will of the majority in all matters affecting party organization, believes in supporting the Democratic ticket nominated at the regular Democratic Convention, are firmly opposed to the effort of any and all men calling themselves Democrats to throw discredit upon the ticket or the party.

Having for many years loyally supported Hugh McLaughlin so long as he represented and stood for the principles of Democracy, it is with regret for past associations that we now announce the stand of Mr. McLaughlin as an avowed seceder and unworthy of the leader of a party which has stood for Democracy for more than a generation.

Therefore we desire to express again our belief in Democracy in order to announce that we do not consider the stand taken by the former leader of the Democracy of this city as being in accordance with Democratic principles and further announce that the Democrats of this Assembly District in view of the utterances made by Mr. McLaughlin consider him no longer a Democrat.

The resolution may be presented at a meeting to-night.

It is understood that the reason it was not presented was that it was considered unadvisable to do so.

It was concluded that as Mr. McLaughlin had already read himself out of the party there was no need of any one doing it for him.

FUSION DEMOCRATS TRUE TO SEAMAN

Statement that They Have Indorsed Mr. Bennett for Municipal Judge Is Denied by Prof.
G. W. Kirchwey, of Columbia.

Prof. George W. Kirchwey, Dean of the Columbia University Law School, said today:

"The statement made by those interested in the candidacy of Mr. Bennett for Judge of the Twelfth District Municipal Court that the Fusion Democracy of the Twenty-first Assembly District has endorsed Mr. Bennett is not correct. With questionable taste a transparency was erected upon the two-story building occupied by the Twelfth Municipal Court, bearing the name of the Fusion Democracy and that of Mr. Low for Mayor and Mr. Bennett for Judge. The city organization of the Fusion Democracy has, however, ordered the removal of the transparency, and this has been done."

"The statement that the Citizens' Union of the Twelfth District is working loyally to elect Mr. Seaman for Judge is not true. The Citizens' Union, organization of the Twelfth District as well as of the Nineteenth District, is doing everything possible to elect Mr. Seaman and to defeat Mr. Bennett. Mr. Seaman will be elected by a large majority. We are waging a fight against political corruption in the city. The Fusion Democracy and the independent strength of the upper west side will show itself on election day and by a large majority rebuke the grafters."

The impression that it is sought to create—that the German-American Reform Union has endorsed Mr. Bennett's candidacy—is shown to be untrue by the following letter from the G. A. B. Schwan, organizer and for many years president of that union for the Twenty-first Assembly District.

"William G. Verplanck, Esq., City.
"My dear Sir: In answer to your favor of yesterday I wish to state that the only a scant number of our members being present at Friday night's meeting, while a number of outsiders attended, the presiding chairman did not risk to attempt a vote on the candidates of the municipal court, but the animus of the citizens present was decidedly in favor of Mr. Seaman. For my part I will not share any and all political friends in behalf of Mr. Seaman and the Fusion ticket in general. Truly yours, G. A. B. SCHWAN."

Many Flashes of Humor Along the Warpath of the Politicians.

It was a trifle intoxicated and inclined to make a noise. He has no particular choice as to candidates and stood outside the big meeting at the Academy of Music while Bourke Cockran told the men who earn their living by the sweat of their brows why they should be for McLaughlin.

There was the sound of cheering that came to the crowd outside as the orator made his points. The man with the lead had been made to move out of the way by a dozen policemen. Finally he decided it was up to him to cheer.

"Hooraay! Hooraay!" he and he stopped. "Go on; hooraay if you are going to," said one.

"What are you going to hooraay for?" inquired another.

"None of your business," replied the man with the skate.

"Hooraay for Hugh!"—and he stopped.

"Go on; hooraay if you are going to," said one.

"What are you going to hooraay for?" inquired another.

"None of your business," replied the man with the skate.

"Hooraay for Hugh!"—and he stopped.

"Go on; hooraay if you are going to," said one.

"What are you going to hooraay for?" inquired another.

"None of your business," replied the man with the skate.

"Hooraay for Hugh!"—and he stopped.

"Go on; hooraay if you are going to," said one.

"What are you going to hooraay for?" inquired another.

"None of your business," replied the man with the skate.

"Hooraay for Hugh!"—and he stopped.

"Go on; hooraay if you are going to," said one.

"What are you going to hooraay for?" inquired another.

"None of your business," replied the man with the skate.

"Hooraay for Hugh!"—and he stopped.

"Go on; hooraay if you are going to," said one.

"What are you going to hooraay for?" inquired another.

"None of your business," replied the man with the skate.

"Hooraay for Hugh!"—and he stopped.

"Go on; hooraay if you are going to," said one.

"What are you going to hooraay for?" inquired another.

"None of your business," replied the man with the skate.

"Hooraay for Hugh!"—and he stopped.

"Go on; hooraay if you are going to," said one.

"What are you going to hooraay for?" inquired another.

"None of your business," replied the man with the skate.

"Hooraay for Hugh!"—and he stopped.

"Go on; hooraay if you are going to," said one.

"What are you going to hooraay for?" inquired another.

"None of your business," replied the man with the skate.

"Hooraay for Hugh!"—and he stopped.

"Go on; hooraay if you are going to," said one.

"The boys on the street worry me for buttons till I can't rest if I have one on," said the friend.

Taking a handful from the box on the table Mr. Smith passed them to him. He put them in his pocket and then planned one on. It was the Haffen button.

"Whose picture is that? Ketchum's with whiskers?" inquired Mr. Smith, who is near-sighted.

Then both looked and read "For Borough President, Louis F. Haffen."

Thinking Haffen might want the button Mr. Smith sent it to him with a note saying it probably had been lost or strayed or been stolen, and that it had no place in Brooklyn.

The way the man who wants to make a hot touch in the headquarters of Senator McCarren in Brooklyn is stood up in the line and finally weeded out is interesting. The Senator, when he opened headquarters at his office decided to make a politician out of his secretary, Dave Hogan. Mr. Hogan is young, but he knows the man who wants to see the Senator. He sizes up the look in the eye and the way the man carries his head and a few other points.

Mr. Winter thought perhaps it was a bit strong.

"Do you think it is a bit too strong to put it that way?" Denny asked of Gottfried Westermacher.

"Denny, it was a bit strong. I have heard many objections to it," said the German leader. You should have been more explicit. Denny had you said you would vote for a barrel of beer that would have been different, but just to vote for the barrel does not appeal to us."

In Williamsburg there are leaders and leaders, and Westermacher is one of the leaders. Mr. Westermacher knows all kinds of Germans and numbers among his friends one German who from constant playing of pinocle has permitted the terms of the game to saturate his conversation.

"He has great following," said Mr. Westermacher, and to see how things were going I asked him how he felt toward the ticket.

"Gottfried," said he, "when you first nominated McLaughlin I think it was a case of a handful of dice. By and by I got a couple of trumps and soon I got a whole handful, and the first thing I knew I got double pinocle. I think he is double pinocle on the first meld with 100 aces and 150 trumps besides."

and says he can tell his business before he says what he wants.

Hogan just grew into managing the campaign. At first he had only one Assembly district to look after, and to say anything as to how he thought the decision would affect his appeal for a pardon in the murder case.

Patrick's conviction of murder was based on the evidence that he had conspired to kill old man Rice to get possession of his millions.

Patrick, under sentence of death for the murder by poison of William M. Rice, an aged millionaire, showed today that he was disappointed and much chagrined over the decision of the Court of Appeals in affirming the judgment of the lower courts that the document which Patrick offered for probate as the will of Rice and in which he was the beneficiary, was a forgery.

Warden Johnson went to Patrick's cell to-day and had a short interview with him. The condemned man said he had heard first of the decision of the Court of Appeals from his wife, who visited him yesterday. Patrick declared it was an improper proceeding and unfair to him to hand down such a decision before his appeal to have his conviction for murder set aside had been disposed of. He showed a less confident air than usual and refused to say anything as to how he thought the decision would affect his appeal for a pardon in the murder case.

Patrick's conviction of murder was based on the evidence that he had conspired to kill old man Rice to get possession of his millions.

Patrick, under sentence of death for the murder by poison of William M. Rice, an aged millionaire, showed today that he was disappointed and much chagrined over the decision of the Court of Appeals in affirming the judgment of the lower courts that the document which Patrick offered for probate as the will of Rice and in which he was the beneficiary, was a forgery.

Warden Johnson went to Patrick's cell to-day and had a short interview with him. The condemned man said he had heard first of the decision of the Court of Appeals from his wife, who visited him yesterday. Patrick declared it was an improper proceeding and unfair to him to hand down such a decision before his appeal to have his conviction for murder set aside had been disposed of. He showed a less confident air than usual and refused to say anything as to how he thought the decision would affect his appeal for a pardon in the murder case.

Patrick's conviction of murder was based on the evidence that he had conspired to kill old man Rice to get possession of his millions.

Patrick, under sentence of death for the murder by poison of William M. Rice, an aged millionaire, showed today that he was disappointed and much chagrined over the decision of the Court of Appeals in affirming the judgment of the lower courts that the document which Patrick offered for probate as the will of Rice and in which he was the beneficiary, was a forgery.

Warden Johnson went to Patrick's cell to-day and had a short interview with him. The condemned man said he had heard first of the decision of the Court of Appeals from his wife, who visited him yesterday. Patrick declared it was an improper proceeding and unfair to him to hand down such a decision before his appeal to have his conviction for murder set aside had been disposed of. He showed a less confident air than usual and refused to say anything as to how he thought the decision would affect his appeal for a pardon in the murder case.

Patrick's conviction of murder was based on the evidence that he had conspired to kill old man Rice to get possession of his millions.

Patrick, under sentence of death for the murder by poison of William M. Rice, an aged millionaire, showed today that he was disappointed and much chagrined over the decision of the Court of Appeals in affirming the judgment of the lower courts that the document which Patrick offered for probate as the will of Rice and in which he was the beneficiary, was a forgery.

Warden Johnson went to Patrick's cell to-day and had a short interview with him. The condemned man said he had heard first of the decision of the Court of Appeals from his wife, who visited him yesterday. Patrick declared it was an improper proceeding and unfair to him to hand down such a decision before his appeal to have his conviction for murder set aside had been disposed of. He showed a less confident air than usual and refused to say anything as to how he thought the decision would affect his appeal for a pardon in the murder case.

Patrick's conviction of murder was based on the evidence that he had conspired to kill old man Rice to get possession of his millions.

Patrick, under sentence of death for the murder by poison of William M. Rice, an aged millionaire, showed today that he was disappointed and much chagrined over the decision of the Court of Appeals in affirming the judgment of the lower courts that the document which Patrick offered for probate as the will of Rice and in which he was the beneficiary, was a forgery.

Warden Johnson went to Patrick's cell to-day and had a short interview with him. The condemned man said he had heard first of the decision of the Court of Appeals from his wife, who visited him yesterday. Patrick declared it was an improper proceeding and unfair to him to hand down such a decision before his appeal to have his conviction for murder set aside had been disposed of. He showed a less confident air than usual and refused to say anything as to how he thought the decision would affect his appeal for a pardon in the murder case.

Patrick's conviction of murder was based on the evidence that he had conspired to kill old man Rice to get possession of his millions.

Patrick, under sentence of death for the murder by poison of William M. Rice, an aged millionaire, showed today that he was disappointed and much chagrined over the decision of the Court of Appeals in affirming the judgment of the lower courts that the document which Patrick offered for probate as the will of Rice and in which he was the beneficiary, was a forgery.

then he got more. Finally when the Senator took the Jefferson Building headquarters Hogan went along.

The Senator says Hogan never had any political father or mother but that, like Topsy, he just grew into politics in one campaign.

"His," said the Senator, "is the only case on record where a politician and a political manager was made over night. Necessity is the mother of invention, and Hogan proves it."

It was Denny Winters, leader of one of the Assembly districts in the old town of Williamsburg, who in discussing the attitude of the organization said he would vote for a beer barrel if it were a candidate on the regular ticket. Having seen the remark in cold type

Mr. Winter thought perhaps it was a bit strong.

"Do you think it is a bit too strong to put it that way?" Denny asked of Gottfried Westermacher.

"Denny, it was a bit strong. I have heard many objections to it," said the German leader. You should have been more explicit. Denny had you said you would vote for a barrel of beer that would have been different, but just to vote for the barrel does not appeal to us."

In Williamsburg there are leaders and leaders, and Westermacher is one of the leaders. Mr. Westermacher knows all kinds of Germans and numbers among his friends one German who from constant playing of pinocle has permitted the terms of the game to saturate his conversation.

"He has great following," said Mr. Westermacher, and to see how things were going I asked him how he felt toward the ticket.

"Gottfried," said he, "when you first nominated McLaughlin I think it was a case of a handful of dice. By and by I got a couple of trumps and soon I got a whole handful, and the first thing I knew I got double pinocle. I think he is double pinocle on the first meld with 100 aces and 150 trumps besides."

and says he can tell his business before he says what he wants.

Hogan just grew into managing the campaign. At first he had only one Assembly district to look after, and

to say anything as to how he thought the decision would affect his appeal for a pardon in the murder case.

Patrick's conviction of murder was based on the evidence that he had conspired to kill old man Rice to get possession of his millions.

Patrick, under sentence of death for the murder by poison of William M. Rice, an aged millionaire, showed today that he was disappointed and much chagrined over the decision of the Court of Appeals in affirming the judgment of the lower courts that the document which Patrick offered for probate as the will of Rice and in which he was the beneficiary, was a forgery.

Warden Johnson went to Patrick's cell to-day and had a short interview with him. The condemned man said he had heard first of the decision of the Court of Appeals from his wife, who visited him yesterday. Patrick declared it was an improper proceeding and unfair to him to hand down such a decision before his appeal to have his conviction for murder set aside had been disposed of. He showed a less confident air than usual and refused to say anything as to how he thought the decision would affect his appeal for a pardon in the murder case.

Patrick's conviction of murder was based on the evidence that he had conspired to kill old man Rice to get possession of his millions.

Patrick, under sentence of death for the murder by poison of William M. Rice, an aged millionaire, showed today that he was disappointed and much chagrined over the decision of the Court of Appeals in affirming the judgment of the lower courts that the document which Patrick offered for probate as the will of Rice and in which he was the beneficiary, was a forgery.

Warden Johnson went to Patrick's cell to-day and had a short interview with him. The condemned man said he had heard first of the decision of the Court of Appeals from his wife, who visited him yesterday. Patrick declared it was an improper proceeding and unfair to him to hand down such a decision before his appeal to have his conviction for murder set aside had been disposed of. He showed a less confident air than usual and refused to say anything as to how he thought the decision would affect his appeal for a pardon in the murder case.

Patrick's conviction of murder was based on the evidence that he had conspired to kill old man Rice to get possession of his millions.

Patrick, under sentence of death for the murder by poison of William M. Rice, an aged millionaire, showed today that he was disappointed and much chagrined over the decision of the Court of Appeals in affirming the judgment of the lower courts that the document which Patrick offered for probate as the will of Rice and in which he was the beneficiary, was a forgery.

Warden Johnson went to Patrick's cell to-day and had a short interview with him. The condemned man said he had heard first of the decision of the Court of Appeals from his wife, who visited him yesterday. Patrick declared it was an improper proceeding and unfair to him to hand down such a decision before his appeal to have his conviction for murder set aside had been disposed of. He showed a less confident air than usual and refused to say anything as to how he thought the decision would affect his appeal for a pardon in the murder case.

Patrick's conviction of murder was based on the evidence that he had conspired to kill old man Rice to get possession of his millions.

Patrick, under sentence of death for the murder by poison of William M. Rice, an aged millionaire, showed today that he was disappointed and much chagrined over the decision of the Court of Appeals in affirming the judgment of the lower courts that the document which Patrick offered for probate as the will of Rice and in which he was the beneficiary, was a forgery.

Warden Johnson went to Patrick's cell to-day and had a short interview with him. The condemned man said he had heard first of the decision of the Court of Appeals from his wife, who visited him yesterday. Patrick declared it was an improper proceeding and unfair to him to hand down such a decision before his appeal to have his conviction for murder set aside had been disposed of. He showed a less confident air than usual and refused to say anything as to how he thought the decision would affect his appeal for a pardon in the murder case.

Patrick's conviction of murder was based on the evidence that he had conspired to kill old man Rice to get possession of his millions.

Patrick, under sentence of death for the murder by poison of William M. Rice, an aged millionaire, showed today that he was disappointed and much chagrined over the decision of the Court of Appeals in affirming the judgment of the lower courts that the document which Patrick offered for probate as the will of Rice and in which he was the beneficiary, was a forgery.

Warden Johnson went to Patrick's cell to-day and had a short interview with him. The condemned man said he had heard first of the decision of the Court of Appeals from his wife, who visited him yesterday. Patrick declared it was an improper proceeding and unfair to him to hand down such a decision before his appeal to have his conviction for murder set aside had been disposed of. He showed a less confident air than usual and refused to say anything as to how he thought the decision would affect his appeal for a pardon in the murder case.

Patrick's conviction of murder was based on the evidence that he had conspired to kill old man Rice to get possession of his millions.

Patrick, under sentence of death for the murder by poison of William M. Rice, an aged millionaire, showed today that he was disappointed and much chagrined over the decision of the Court of Appeals in affirming the judgment of the lower courts that the document which Patrick offered for probate as the will of Rice and in which he was the beneficiary, was a forgery.

Warden Johnson went to Patrick's cell to-day and had a short interview with him. The condemned man said he had heard first of the decision of the Court of Appeals from his wife, who visited him yesterday. Patrick declared it was an improper proceeding and unfair to him to hand down such a decision before his appeal to have his conviction for murder set aside had been disposed of. He showed a less confident air than usual and refused to say anything as to how he thought the decision would affect his appeal for a pardon in the murder case.

Patrick's conviction of murder was based on the evidence that he had conspired to kill old man Rice to get possession of his millions.

Patrick, under sentence of death for the murder by poison of William M. Rice, an aged millionaire, showed today that he was disappointed and much chagrined over the decision of the Court of Appeals in affirming the judgment of the lower courts that the document which Patrick offered for probate as the will of Rice and in which he was the beneficiary, was a forgery.

Warden Johnson went to Patrick's cell to-day and had a short interview with him. The condemned man said he had heard first of the decision of the Court of Appeals from his wife, who visited him yesterday. Patrick declared it was an improper proceeding and unfair to him to hand down such a decision before his appeal to have his conviction for murder set aside had been disposed of. He showed a less confident air than usual and refused to say anything as to how he thought the decision would affect his appeal for a pardon in the murder case.

Broadway, 33d to 34th Street. Saks & Company Broadway, 33d to 34th Street

A Sale of Suits & Coats for Women At Very Special Prices for Thursday.

Garments which in form, fabric and elaboration are far from commonplace. They are modifications and adaptations of imported models.

Tailor-Made Suits of black, blue or brown cheviot, long or blouse coat with skirt effect, three models from which to select.

Value $35.00. Special at $26.00

Tailor-Made Suits of black, blue or brown cloth, walking or long skirt, several different models, including long tailored, short blouse and Russian blouse coats with skirt effects.

Value $25.00 to $29.00. Special at $18.50

Evening and Reception Coats of white broadcloth, three-quarter lengths, several different models.

At $48.00, $52.00 and $62.00

Top Coats of tan covert cloth, three-quarter effects; tailored seams with rows of stitching, satin lined.

Value $24.00. Special at $17.50

Three-quarter Coats of tan covert, 39 inches long; an entirely new model, with two capes over shoulder, collar and cuffs trimmed with combination of red and green cloth and white braid.

Value $32.00. Special at $24.50

Rain Coats of Oxford mixture, with double cape and belt.

Value $21.00. Special at $14.50

A Sale of Large Oriental Carpets At Special Prices for Thursday, Friday & Saturday.

It is in the carpets of ample proportions that the Oriental weaver exercises his art to best advantage. They give him greater latitude in the intricacies of design and harmony of colors. Those presented here are exquisite pieces, which are offered at the following very special prices.

SERAPE RUGS.

Size 10.9 x 9.3 Value $215.00 Special at $175.00

Size 13.7 x 9.5 Value $320.00 Special at $285.00

Size 12.7 x 9.10 Value $335.00 Special at $287.50

Size 13.4 x 9.11 Value $375.00 Special at $295.00

Size 13.6 x 10.6 Value $375.00 Special at $310.00

Size 13.4 x 10.1 Value $395.00 Special at $312.00

Size 11.7 x 9.7 Value $400.00 Special at $315.00

Size 14.2 x 9.8 Value $425.00 Special at $327.00

KHORASSAN RUGS.